David focuses his practice on complex commercial, business and technology litigation. His primary areas of practice have included antitrust, securities and intellectual property. He has litigated numerous cases involving mergers and acquisitions, license agreements, software and systems design, systems integration, telecommunications, professional malpractice, trade secrets, real estate, insurance, banking, construction, oil and gas, health care, unfair competition and trademark matters. He has represented clients in litigation and arbitration matters and in trial and appellate proceedings in several states and the District of Columbia. He also regularly counsels clients on compliance issues.

REPRESENTATIVE EXPERIENCE

- Lead counsel for Colorado-based Fortune 500 company in “entire fairness” merger litigation arising from the $134 million completed acquisition of an Austin-based Internet banking company.
- Co-lead counsel for major satellite broadcaster in “baseball style” arbitration against Big 4 network owned and operated television stations.
- Lead counsel in more than 20 systems integration and software lawsuits and arbitrations for a major national telephone services provider.
- Lead counsel for alleged control person of defunct HMO in a $180 million lawsuit brought by special deputy receiver. Claims included breach of fiduciary duty and related insurance code violations.
- Co-lead counsel for Big 4 accounting firm in an arbitration proceeding relating to a business valuation prepared by the firm.
- Lead counsel for Austin-based software company in merger litigation involving claims of securities fraud, as well as claims concerning ownership rights to certain software following the completed merger.
- Counsel for major Texas law firm in an $80 million lawsuit involving claims of alleged securities fraud.
- Lead counsel for mortgage company in defense of a lawsuit involving alleged fraud and fraudulent inducement in an alleged “bait & switch” scheme relating to commercial mortgages.
- Lead counsel for Chicago-based Fortune 500 company in an arbitration proceeding involving claims of fraud, breach of contract and securities law violations in connection with the acquisition of a Texas-based company.
